animals and people

- Some companion animals are abandoned at the border. Local shelters try to help, but they're overwhelmed by the number. The cause is that some locations centres or private people offering the shelter to refugees from Ukraine do not allow animals and so the refugees abandon their pets

Need to find temporary housing for these pets. Probably many families want their pet back afterwards. Finding local civil homes as home quarantine until rabies vaccine (possible as no rabies vaccination?)

Risk assessment from the Germany National Reference Laboratory

Although Ukraine cannot yet be considered rabies-free, the disease has only very rarely occurred in recent years, even in unvaccinated dogs. According to calculations by the National Reference Laboratory for Lyssaviruses at the Friedrich-Loeffler Institute, the probability that a dog is in the incubation phase at the time of the border crossing is 1: 300,000. This extremely low risk applies to unvaccinated dogs. In the case of vaccinated dogs, the danger is largely negligible. The topic currently presents one of the slightest challenges, but with an appropriate preliminary report, one should always think of rabies in case of unclear symptoms.
